五、文章

(一) 议论文

(2025 年 12 月) Directions: For this part, you are allowed 30 minutes to write an essay that begins with the sentence "It is believed that teachers can exert a profound influence on their students' academic pursuit and personal development." You can make comments, cite examples or use your personal experiences to develop your essay. You should write at least 150 words but no more than 200 words.

第一段

It is believed that teachers can exert a profound influence on their students' academic pursuit and personal development. From my perspective, a good teacher is not only a transmitter of knowledge in the classroom but also a guide in students' journey of growth.

第二段

Academically, teachers play a key role in sparking students' interest in learning. A case in point is my English teacher, Ms. Liu. She always manages to find ways to transform tedious knowledge into vivid stories, helping students learn English easily and happily. She also teaches effective learning methods, such as logical thinking and problem-solving skills, which lay a solid foundation for students' future academic research. More importantly, teachers, who encourage students to face challenges bravely and correct their mistakes with patience, set an example of integrity and responsibility through their daily words and behaviors. Without the guide of teachers, students are very likely to get lost .

第三段

There is no doubt that teachers' influence on students is both profound and lasting. Therefore, teachers, apart from conducting research activities, should also consider how to better guide students along their career and life paths.

(2025 年 6 月) Directions: For this part, you are allowed 30 minutes to write an essay that begins with the sentence "As requirements for job applications are getting increasingly higher, college students ought to be better prepared for their future career." You can make comments, cite examples or use your personal experiences to develop your essay.

第一段

As requirements for job applications are getting increasingly higher, college students ought to be better prepared for their future career. In my opinion, in the increasingly fierce competition of the job market, the following points can help them stand out from the crowd.

第二段(解决问题型)

Firstly, it is essential for graduates to know their advantages and disadvantages. By understanding their own interests, strengths, and weaknesses, college students can find a career path that suits them best. For example, an outgoing student who is good at communication and sensitive to the market may be more suitable for a career in marketing. Secondly, graduates should hunt for part-time jobs. Only in such jobs can you gain an in-depth understanding of the job contents and development prospects of different careers. If college students go to different companies for internships to determine their future careers, they will definitely find their favorable jobs after graduation. Lastly, they, by working hard and having certain certificates, set short-term and long-term goals based on self-assessment and career exploration, and make adjustments according to the actual condition.

In short, as competition intensifies, college students must make their career plans as early as possible for fear that they might waste the precious four years of university. Only by taking initiative can college students find the right direction and realize their career aspirations.

(二)图表作文 2021 年 6 月

It is beyond dispute in the chart that the share of urban population, from 1980 to 2019, soared from 19.39% to 60.6% sharply. Its implication is quite obvious: the Chinese economy is developing at a rate nobody can ignore.

First and foremost, migrant workers who were born in the countryside tend to find more job opportunities in cities such as Guangzhou and Shenzhen, making their children enjoy better education there. In addition, thanks to the Reform and Opening-Up Policy, there are an increasing number of companies and plants which need more skilled workers to produce more high-quality products for consumers. Last but not least, it is the government that plays a key role in urbanization. Laws and regulations have been made to ensure the benefit of farmers. As a result, they can trust their employers and work for them without any worry.

In the future, there will be more farmers flooding into cities, becoming one of the city dwellers. On one hand, they must not be discriminated against by urban citizens. On the other hand, we should not ignore the negative impact of this trend such as traffic jams, pollution and the pressure of social security. Thus, the progress of urbanization must be given close attention as we navigate both its opportunities and challenges.

(三)名言哲理型作文

(2020 年 9 月) Directions: For this part, you are allowed 30 minutes to write an essay on the saying “Wealth of the mind is the only true wealth.” You should write at least 150 words but no more than 200 words.

When it comes to wealth, ideas may differ among men and women in all walks of life. From my perspective, I support the argument that it is wealth of the mind that is the only true wealth.

Although numerous cases are available for this argument, the following one about my teacher Ms. Liu is the most suitable. She was born in a poor family with three siblings. Furthermore, she, years later, failed to realize her dream to attend an esteemed university even though she studied hard during senior high school. Under such circumstances, she never gave up, being convinced that “From the gutter, we can still look up at the stars.” And what she agrees is that poverty is never scary; she believes what we should be afraid of is that our minds are needy. It was through years of endeavors that her dream came true. So the story vividly tells us that wealth of mind is more essentially valued than material wealth.

To conclude, it is high time for teenagers and youngsters to pursue mental richness because there is no limit to the wealth of money. Kids should be encouraged to read more books to broaden their horizons from an early age. Only by thinking like this can we become more optimistic and lead a meaningful life.

思考:第二段无话可说怎么办?

1. 举例论证

1) 为什么培养孩子迎接挑战的能力?

Although numerous cases are available for this argument, the following one about my teacher Ms. Liu is the most suitable. She was born in a poor family with three siblings. Furthermore, she, years later, failed to realize her dream to attend an esteemed university even though she studied hard during senior high school. Under such circumstances, she never gave up, being convinced that "From the gutter, we can still look up at stars." And what she believes is that poverty is never scary; what we should be afraid of is that our minds are needy. It was through years of endeavors that her dream came true. So the story vividly tells us that it is necessary that students should be encouraged to develop the ability to meet challenges.

2) Nowadays more and more college students have come to realize that social practice and academic learning are equally important.

For example, one of my friends named Dayan has participated in various part-time jobs during her university years. Although she might be quite busy, she got a lot of work experience besides academic knowledge. Thus, she found a decent job as soon as she graduated.

2.正反论证

if... if not...

为什么要自律?

If you can control your mind and behaviors, you will definitely become peaceful, devoting yourself to your study. The more intently you concentrate on your books, the more easily you will achieve your goal. On the contrary, if college students lack self-discipline, spending much time watching short videos or playing games, they might achieve nothing until the end of life.

为什么要注重锻炼身体?

If teenagers and youngsters can take some time to exercise in their spare time, they will become healthier. With good health, they can make great contributions to the development of the Chinese economy. By contrast, if the young and the old fail to pay attention to the importance of fitness, they might have quite a few physical and mental problems such as obesity or mental health issues.

为什么要参加社会实践?

If college students really understand the importance of social practice and are willing to participate in such activities, they can get much work experience. With a lot of experience, it will be easy for them to find jobs after graduation. Nevertheless, if they just stay on campus without any action, it might be difficult for them to find suitable jobs in the future.

You should write at least 150 words but no more than 200 words.

第一段:

Living in an increasingly competitive world, college students should better prepare themselves to confront various challenges. Especially in the increasingly severe job market, only those who are well-prepared can truly stand out. Therefore, it is extremely necessary for every college student to make adequate preparations.

第二段

First and foremost, students need to continuously expand their scope of knowledge beyond textbooks. For example, taking elective courses related to computers and AI can add highlights to their resumes. At the same time, practical experience is equally important. Internships, research projects or part-time jobs allow them to apply knowledge to real tasks, laying a solid foundation for future career development. Last but not least, it is beyond dispute that learning to confront setbacks and challenges is a lifelong lesson for college students. Whether facing academic pressure or hunting for a job, a positive mindset enables them to adjust and keep moving forward.

第三段

(2025 年 12 月)People who repeatedly give unwanted advice can be well-meaning and genuinely want to help. Others might do this out of a sense of self-worth around the ability to influence others. One study found that people with a high tendency to seek power were more likely to give advice than those with an opposite tendency.

Under the guise(外表) of unselfishness, people may be driven to give you unwanted advice because it makes them feel powerful or in control. They may not be fully aware of this drive, however.

These people may also display a problematic degree of emotional vulnerability, becoming upset very quickly, and taking a long time to calm down. It is possible that their emotions were only validated in childhood when they were at their loudest, encouraging them to adopt responses to discomfort that are excessive in most situations.

When someone is giving advice in order to make themselves feel more powerful, there is underlying anxiety to their behavior that recipients of the advice tend to notice. It can be tempting in this situation to react harshly to the advice giver and to accuse them of being manipulative, but this approach might produce an undesired result.

If the act of giving advice is contributing actively to someone's feelings of self-worth, an outright(直率的) rejection may be perceived as a threat, activating their fight-or-flight response, possibly causing them to double down on their validation-seeking behavior, or leading to a larger conflict.

The key is to validate without over-identifying. You can let them know that you have heard them and appreciate where they are coming from without taking on the potentially damaging narrative that you could not have gotten by without their help.

If you have trouble setting boundaries tactfully, prioritize working on your own ability to self-regulate. As uncomfortable as it may make you continuously receiving unwanted advice, if you can respond with compassion, the situation will likely diffuse much faster.

Though it is usually not the intended outcome of giving unsolicited advice, many who receive it often feel stressed, offended, or simply annoyed by unwanted suggestions. Setting a boundary in this regard, if you feel you need one, is perfectly reasonable and something that can bring you increased emotional safety.

It is best to set boundaries in a way that takes into account the individual's underlying reasons for doing what they are doing to avoid unnecessary conflict and more stress.

51. What is the finding of one study about people who keep giving unsolicited advice?

- A) They turn out to be well-meaning.
- B) They are genuinely kind-hearted.
- C) They are capable of influencing others.
- D) They are inclined to crave for power.

52. What is the problem with people who are driven to give you unsolicited advice?

- A) They may be quick to upset others.
- B) They may be emotionally vulnerable.
- C) They want their voice to be the loudest.
- D) They respond to discomfort excessively.

53. What is the advice receiver tempted to do when noticing the advice giver's underlying anxiety?

- A) Reveal the undesired result of their approach.
- B) Refuse their advice in an undisguised manner.
- C) Bring their real motives to the surface.
- D) Accuse them of trying to control others.

54. How is the advice giver likely to react to the rejection of their advice?

- A) They may regard it as a threat.
- B) They may modify their behavior.
- C) They get ready for a larger conflict.
- D) They begin to doubt their self-worth.

55. What should the advice receiver do to avoid unnecessary conflict?

- A) Concede the advice is perfectly reasonable.
- B) Give their reasons for not taking the advice.
- C) Understand why the advice giver offers the advice.
- D) Explain their chosen way of handling the situation.

(2025 年 12 月) Many see friendships as a comfort blanket: a shoulder to cry on, a reliable soul to confide in. However, more often than not, in our eagerness to seek individual success, we lose friends along the way and that has become part of the process.

The chaos and never-ending turmoil that accompanies everyday life is an aggressive obstacle in the pursuit of stable friendships. As students, we use this excuse to shrug off losing people who we once thought to be loved ones.

Instead of viewing our lives as a race, where everyone is on their own path to some form of success, we must relearn to value the connections we make along the track. We must reevaluate the harm of radical, individual freedom.

Radical individualism elevates the freedom of the individual over the collective. It argues, for instance, that universal healthcare, an example of collectivism, threatened the dream of many Americans.

Many of us have fallen victim to an individualistic culture. Society tends to celebrate personal achievement and commend it based on the assumption that winning or succeeding is a consequence of working harder than the next person.

As a society, we idolize the concept of “losing friends on the road to success.” I remember hearing in high school, “Don’t worry about losing friendships, just focus on study and getting into college. That’s all that will matter in the long run,” a sentiment that is not unique to my experience. It’s preached in many success stories, and it’s embedded in the way we see growth. Motivational speakers will push their audience to be complacent to the inevitable end of losing friends. Spend too much time with friends? You're losing time better utilized on your achievements. Invest time in your relationships? Invest time in your work instead.

This constant need to succeed has blinded us from seeing through the whirlwind of change that accompanies our everyday lives. We are expected to tangibly succeed, earn awards, get higher positions, earn better grades. In order to succeed, we lose friends, and that has sadly become normalized.

We cannot be complacent with losing friendships because they are our anchors.

Yes, pursue success. Challenge yourself. Push limits. But contrary to all the self-proclaimed success experts, doing it alone does not make you more successful or any better than someone who achieved it with the help of others.

Put effort into fostering healthy relationships, and maintaining them through your busy schedule that seems like it leaves no time for anyone else. Although we may be living in a society that treasures the independent pursuit of achievement, having people to support and love you on the way is far more important than any end result.

46. What often happens when people are eager to pursue individual success?

- A) They lack a shoulder to cry on.
- B) They have no soul to confide in.
- C) They cannot find reliable friends.
- D) They ignore their ties with friends.

47. What does the author advise people to do in their pursuit of radical individualism?

- A) Reexamine its detrimental effects.
- B) Shrug off the loss of their loved ones.
- C) Avoid the chaos and turmoil involved.
- D) Remove aggressive obstacles in the way.

48. What is American society's assumption of personal achievement?
- A) It is to be duly celebrated and highly commended.
 - B) It is a sure way to fulfill a person's dream.
 - C) It revolves around an individualistic culture.
 - D) It reflects a person's exceptional endeavor.
49. What is preached in many success stories?
- A) Attaching importance to academic gains on the road to success.
 - B) Investing one's time in work instead of connecting with friends.
 - C) Trying to strengthen friendships in one's pursuit of personal success.
 - D) Excelling in academic performance to get into a prestigious college.
50. What can we infer from the passage regarding the pursuit of success?
- A) No one can succeed without pushing limits.
 - B) No one can afford to neglect close friends.
 - C) Collectivism is superior to individualism.
 - D) Success experts often lead people to ruin.

(2025 年 12 月) The History and Meaning of Colored Traffic Lights

36. Upon seeing a flashing yellow arrow, a driver should let pedestrians and traffic pass first before taking the turn.

Q) Flashing Yellow Arrows are part of a four-signal traffic light. These are used in some states after a protected green turn signal, or arrow, but before a steady yellow arrow. When a flashing yellow arrow is shown, you can take the turn after yielding to pedestrians and traffic. Steady Yellow Arrows maintain the normal yellow light caution in three-light signals, meaning to stop or prepare to stop. In a four-signal system that has a flashing yellow arrow, the steady yellow arrow is a signal that the yield period is ending.

37. The red and green automatic traffic light system originated in an American city.

I) The system allowed police officers to move from the middle of the street to a corner. From that vantage(有利地位), an officer could oversee the crowd. If an emergency vehicle came, the officer could flip a switch and clear the intersection by triggering all red lights. The emergency vehicle could now pass effortlessly. Finally, in San Francisco the first red and green electric light system that could be operated automatically (or manually) was introduced in 1917.

38. Residents of an American city tend to share the opinion that time saved on the road justifies the cost of upgrading its traffic light system.

A) Timed traffic lights are set according to schedules that are supposed to coordinate with peak traffic hours. Cities need to monitor and update signal light time schedules at least every two years to keep these systems effective. In Los Angeles, California, an ambitious project to go a step further and synchronize(使同步) every red light in Los Angeles cost over 400 million dollars. Ask a resident of the city and they are likely to agree that saving time on the road is well worth it. If implemented nationwide, synchronization could shave 10% off traffic congestion(堵塞) and 20% off air pollution. Congestion costs time, money, and lives.

39. Mass production of cars made it possible for ordinary people to buy them.

J) In 1920, the first three-color light system was introduced in Detroit—also known as Motor City, USA. The evolution of traffic light signals could not have a more appropriate context than Motor City. Ford Motor Company was founded in Detroit in 1903 (and other motor companies followed). Ford made cars affordable for more common people, rather than the wealthy, by creating larger scale factory production.

40. What a traffic light means is almost the same everywhere despite some variations.

R) Traffic light meaning is fairly consistent across the board with various deviations. Green means it's safe to proceed (though you should still exercise caution). Yellow means caution and yield. Red means danger and stop. Always drive defensively and obey traffic signals.

41. Pedestrian crossings came into being only in the mid-twentieth century.

L) Stop lights were incredibly important in chaotic city streets. Crosswalks weren't even introduced until 1951. The first pedestrian fatality in the United States was in 1899.

42. People raced to address increasing traffic problems along with the expansion of cities and traffic.

F) As traffic and cities grew, so did the race to solve growing traffic problems. The first traffic signals were semaphores. Semaphores are towers with moving arms signaling for traffic to stop or go. They could be manual or automatic. There was no consistent design. Various models were invented and put into place in cities as the need arose.

43. When the warning yellow light was introduced, driving became safer and traffic accidents reduced.

K) Stop and go were insufficient for the new volumes of cars zooming through intersections. Streets were full of new numbers of cars in addition to delivery wagons, bustling crowds, bicycles, horse-drawn carriages, and street cars. The introduction of the cautionary yellow light helped increase driver safety, decreasing accidents that come from running red lights.

44. The signal system on the railroad served as the basis for the first traffic light.

B) The first traffic light was invented in London in the 1860's, but it was hardly recognizable—or effective. It had been adapted from the railroad signal system by a railway manager, John Peak Knight, in 1868. The railroads used red gas lights at night to signal stops and green gas lights during the daytime. Knight installed a similar gas light, semaphore (臂板信号) system near London's Westminster Bridge in December of 1868.

45. Even though a green light signals “go”, attention should be paid to traffic on either side in case some driver is being careless or ignoring a red light.

N) Morgan sold the patent to General Electric—and the spread of the traffic light was green lighted. Green means go. It is that simple, but it's still best to check both ways for oncoming traffic that may not be paying attention or is running the light. Yellow means slow down and prepare to stop. It does not mean full-throttle(全速) ahead.

We humans love to believe we are special, but science and technology have repeatedly proved this conviction wrong. People 26 thought that humans were the only animals to use tools, to form teams or to propagate culture, but science has shown that other animals do each of these things.

Meanwhile, technology has quashed(使无效), one by one, claims that 27 tasks require a human brain. The first adding machine was invented in 1623. This past year, a computer-generated work won an art contest.

I believe the moment when computers meet and 28 human intelligence is on the horizon.

How will human intelligence and creativity be valued when machines become smarter and more creative than the brightest people? There will likely be a spectrum. In some 29, people still value humans doing things, even if a computer can do it better. It's been a quarter of a century since a computer beat world champion Garry Kasparov, but human chess hasn't gone away.

In other fields, human skill will seem costly and 30. Take illustration for example: most readers don't care whether the graphic 31 a magazine article was drawn by a person or a computer—they just want it to be relevant, new and perhaps 32.

And, of course, this question isn't black or white. Many fields will be a 33, where some humans find a lucky place, but most of the work is done by computers, like in manufacturing today, where much of the work is accomplished by robots, but some humans must be there to 34 the machines.

If history is any guide, it's almost certain that advances in AI will cause more jobs to 35, that creative workers with human-only skills will become richer but fewer in number, and that those who own creative technology will become the new ultra-rich.
